

Representing clients at the appellate level is not “business as usual” – appellate advocacy requires a unique set of skills, best honed by experience. Jackson Kelly’s Appellate practice area is nationally recognized and respected, featuring attorneys with years of experience in both state and federal appellate courts across the nation, and who are consistently recognized in publications such as The Best Lawyers in America®. Whether appealing to a government agency or a state or federal appellate court, our attorneys have an extensive depth of knowledge that has translated into a long-standing tradition of legal excellence on behalf of clients.

The attorneys in the Firm’s Appellate practice area work effectively and aggressively and have represented clients both directly and as amicus curiae from a broad range of industries on a variety of appellate issues, including:

- Construction and construction claims
- Labor and employment claims
- Financial
- Government
- Health care
- Insurance and insurance litigation
- Manufacturing
- Medical
- Personal injury
- Private individuals
- Professional liability defense